Downspeed (the first speed) refers to connection rate transmitting data from the Internet to your computer such as downloading a website, or software program.

Upspeed (the second number) refers to data transmitted from your computer to the Internet (requesting a web address.)

Multiple Computer User

Computers can be networked together to share a high-speed connection at a single location using a router. WCCTA strongly recommends password protection on your router and firewall protection.

Internet on our fiber network does not need any additional equipment. A jack is specially wired and an Ethernet cord connects the jack to your computer.
